Lobbyists.info Hits the Mobile Web

Bethesda, Md. (Oct. 7, 2008) – Lobbyists.info is pleased to announce its foray into the mobile world with the introduction of a mobile web version of its government relations database.

Lobbyists.info is now available on Blackberry and other mobile phone web browsers. Users of this service will be able to search for lobbying firms and individual lobbyists while trekking up to Capitol Hill or while prepping for a meeting with fellow lobbyists on K Street.

The profiles displayed on the mobile web version of Lobbyists.info are similar to those displayed on the actual web site. On an organization's profile page, users will be able to view contact information, the lobbyists it employs and the clients it represents (for lobbying firms) or the outside firms it retains (for clients).

Those looking for individual lobbyists will be able to see their individual contact information, the clients they represent and their professional and educational background.

In addition, mobile Lobbyists.info users will be able to find lobbyists who previously worked for a current member of Congress. Entering a current senator or House member in the lobbyist alumni search will show all of the lobbyists who previously worked for that person.

To use the search features and for more information, please visit <http://mobile.lobbyists.info> either through the Web or on a phone with mobile web access.
